Behrooz Ghamari-Tabrizi, Associate Professor in the Departments of History and Sociology, is the recipient of a Conrad Humanities Scholar Award. These awards, funded by a gift from Arlys Conrad, are designed to support the work of exceptionally promising associate professors in humanities units within the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, with the aim of enhancing retention of the University’s strongest scholarly leaders.

Behrooz Ghamari-Tabrizi, a specialist in global history, the Iranian revolution and Islamist social movements, is the author of Islam and Dissent in Postrevolutionary Iran: Abdolkarim Soroush, Religious Politics and Democratic Reform (I.B. Tauris, 2008) and numerous articles, and is co-editor of The Iranian Revolution Turns Thirty (Duke University Press, 2009, a special issue of Radical History Review). He is currently completing a book titled Foucault, the Iranian Revolution, and Enlightenment, which explores possibility of revolutionary politics outside the emancipatory frame of the project of Enlightenment. In this book, Professor Ghamari-Tabrizi advances a novel reading of Foucault’s writings on the Iranian revolution and shows how his encounter with the Iranian revolution informed his later lectures on ethics, spirituality and enlightenment. He is also working on a long-term project on the conception of trauma, through a study of how Revolutionary Guards and other volunteer militia justified the violence and trauma of the Iran-Iraq War with references to religious symbols and allegories, how they coped with the predicaments of reintegration into society, and how they reconcile their wartime sacred, messianic aspiration with the mundane concerns of everyday life.
